

Performance Commentary

SKAGEN m2 ended January with an all-time high NAV, delivering strong absolute return. The benchmark performed slightly better thanks to a strong Asian market, where we have a relative underweight. It is set to be an interesting year in global real estate markets. The major global real estate markets have enjoyed a strong first month to 2019 in both absolute and relative terms, broadly outperforming their domestic equity markets (in USD). The month ended with the positive news that the Fed is putting interest rate hikes on hold and taking a more flexible approach to its unwinding of quantitative easing policies.

The fund's best performer was the Brazilian homebuilder MRV Engenharia following a strong December. The Swedish rental operator Hembra recovered from the dip in December and came in as second best performer. The Swedish real estate names in the portfolio had a strong month with Catena at an all-time high. Our Hong Kong based hotel operator Shangri-La disappointed with another month of poor performance. There were few other meaningful detractors in a strong month.

The sector remains attractive due to its stable and rising top-line, low cost financing and solid cash flows. However, valuations are currently more stretched in certain markets and segments.
